Authenticity, respect, openness, loyalty, responsibility, customer service, generosity, citizenship, personal life and importance of family- these are some of the qualities that can be admired in the Johnson Electric Coil Company. A third generation family owned business in the electric transformers industry, we remain, and intend to always remain, a small family owned business that provides good jobs to our community. Further, we remain devoted to pushing the boundaries of customer service and quality, to provide the best possible. This dedication sets Johnson Electric Coil apart from all competition.

Johnson Electric Coil engineers work closely with our customers in the early stages as we develop new products. All of our products we create are custom, designed to cater to the customer's requirements. In this way we are able to provide customers with the exact design and manufacturing services that they desire but cannot accomplish themselves. Applying lean manufacturing techniques and 5S principles we can provide customers with CAD supported design services, prototyping, and manufacturing to custom specifications as well as comprehensive UL, CSA, CE and RoHS compliance to all domestic and international standards.

While we have been able to grow from our humble basement roots to a 12 million dollar company with its residence in Antigo, Wisconsin, we have remained dedicated to our small family owned business traditions. With our quick response to customer needs and the ability to partner closely with those customers, we are able to set ourselves apart from our competition. We make sure that our experienced engineers are available even at the earliest stages of product development, ensuring that all potential problems can be avoided immediately. In doing so our engineers become part of the customer's staff. In choosing Johnson Electric Coil, customers can always depend on receiving the highest quality service and products at competitive prices.
